

ROGER MARSH, Ph.D.
1995

Thoughts on SENTAC

Roger R. Marsh, Ph.D.

Professionally speaking, I am neither fish nor fowl. My training is in experimental psychology, where I learned of sensory processes and experimental design, but I have done no research in psychology for decades. My research interests, and my collaborators, are most often in otolaryngology and audiology, but I am a member of neither of these professions.

SENTAC, with its emphasis on collegiality among diverse disciplines, is the one professional society where I feel truly at home. The annual meetings are venues for informing members of advances in their fields and others, for exploring new ideas, for meeting valued old friends.